North Korea's leader Kim Jong Un is making a big move in his quest for nuclear weapons. He's reportedly been making another nuclear test, including preparing to launch an intercontinental ballistic missile. Both are giant steps toward creating a missile that can reach the US mainland, and potentially striking the homeland. But Pyongyang might be getting a serious head-start in its quest to build such a weapon. North Korea has been developing these kinds of missiles for years, according to intelligence agencies. But experts aren't sure whether the country has actually tested an ICBM. 648931e174

I have a decent idea, but I need some help to write the code. I use cell.exec_ to query the database and return the results in a separate cell. A: Use this: =INDEX(("checkitem"&A2);"checkitem"&A2;COLUMNS("checkitem"&A2)) Change A2 with the cell where you want to check. The result will give you the row number: =INDEX("checkitem"&A2;COLUMNS("checkitem"&A2);COLUMNS("checkitem"&A2)) Q: Using time() to set time on when script should be scheduled I have a script which runs every 5 seconds. I need to calculate the current time since when I ran the script the first time. I am using PHP, (for my server) so I am not using any languages. I am getting the current time using the function: I then need to get the time from that and subtract that from the current time to find out how many seconds have passed. I am not sure how I can calculate this. Could you please help me with this?

Thanks! A: How does this work? Every time a request is processed, the current time is checked. If the current time is less than the time when the script started running (last call) this means that the whole script is finished. The while loop only continues if the current time is still less than the last one. A: The first thing you should do is set the correct timezone before calculating the current time.
